

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Writing Spot: It's time to write a résumé!

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe jobs and careers in both work and social contexts appropriate for the interlocutor.

Ask your partner:

- What is the information that needs to be included in a résumé?
- Is there anything that you think should not be included in a résumé? Why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can write about events and experiences related to jobs.
- I can write about general issues related to a résumé.
- I can explain how to write a résumé.

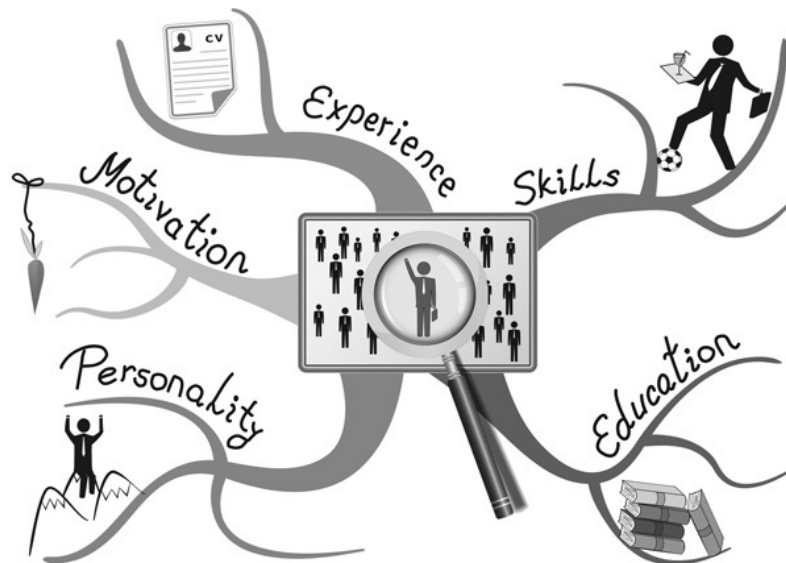

Let's Explore!

Kristi talks about the value of action verbs in a résumé.

* "Action verbs" are strong compelling verbs that will catch a hiring manager's attention.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

The first half of the workshop was great! We were shown what should be in a résumé and what to do to set about writing a résumé. In the second half, we learned the steps to follow to write a résumé. After a style is decided on and you choose a job for your résumé, you should brainstorm your experience and skills.

Then you're ready to write your résumé! Start with your contact information: your name, e-mail address and phone number at the top and usually centered on the page. Next, you should put your statement of career objective, usually one line in sentence format. This is a very brief synopsis of who you are and the type of employer you are aiming to work for. If you don't have much work experience, you can list your qualifications in the next section. These are usually adjectives to describe your work ethic, like persistent, industrious or diligent.

The next section is where you provide details of the work experience that you got at school, a job or a volunteer position. You want your résumé to stand out from the rest so you need to get creative with your verbs. Use action verbs like reconciled, diagnosed and enhanced. If you have limited work experience you can list your employers and your position in the next section. You can include the dates you worked, but this is optional. The education that you received is listed in the next part. Include the year when you received your degree or certificate. If you want, you can include any other information which you think may be of interest to a potential employer. This can be interests, other skills or certificates.

Let's Practice!

What does John think should be included in a résumé?

Instructions: Circle the relative pronouns (that, who, which, when) that are optional in the paragraph.

A resume is a very brief synopsis of the type of employer who you are aiming to work for. The next section is where you provide details of the work experience that you got at school, a job or a volunteer position. You can include the dates that you worked. You can also include the experience that is important. Include the year when you received your degree or certificate and the year that is written on your degree. You can include any other information which you think may be of interest to a potential employer.

Let's Practice!

Now, it's your turn to write a résumé. Use the information from the stimulus to complete the activity.

Instructions:

- 1) *Imagine you are applying for a new job as a copy editor. You have already had a paying job and an internship. You have to write a résumé that is tailored for the industry that you want to work in.
- 2) Write a one-page résumé.
- 3) Include sections for contact information, objective, qualifications, experience, work history, education and any other pertinent information.
- 4) Use action verbs to describe your past experience.
- 5) Write in formal language and in bulleted points.
- 6) Write your résumé in an extra piece of paper.

- 1) Contact information: _____
- 2) Objective statement: _____
- 3) Qualifications: _____
- 4) Experience (action verbs): _____
- 5) Work history: _____
- 6) Education: _____
- 7) Other information: _____

Extension Activity

Make a list of action verbs.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Think of a job you have or have had in the past.
Or, think of work you have done at school.
- Make a list of all the action verbs that you can use to describe the experience you have.
- Use the Internet if you need to find action verbs.
- Compare your list with a partner's list.
- Ask your partner to explain any verbs on their list that you do not know.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I think about my work experience.

☐ ☐

I use action verbs to describe my experience.

☐ ☐

I research action verbs on the Internet.

☐ ☐

I compare my list with a partner.

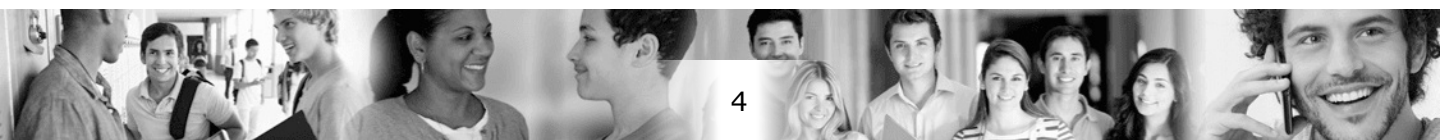

☐ ☐

I ask my partner about new vocabulary.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- synopsis (noun): a short description of something e.g. This is a very brief synopsis of who you are and the type of employer who you are aiming to work for.
- to aim for (verb): to intend e.g. I aim to find a position in an advertising company.
- to set about (verb): to begin doing
e.g. We were shown what should be in a résumé and what to do to set about writing a résumé.
- industrious (adjective): hard-working and productive
e.g. These are usually adjectives to describe your work ethic, like persistent, industrious and diligent.
- persistent (adjective): lasting for a long time
e.g. To find a job you have to be persistent in your search.
- to reconcile (verb): to find a way in which two situations or beliefs that are opposed to each other can agree and exist together e.g. Use action verbs like reconciled, diagnosed and enhanced.
- to diagnose (verb): to recognize and name the exact character of a problem, by examining it e.g. Diagnose is a good action word to use on a résumé.
- to enhance (verb): to increase, augment or improve a characteristic of something e.g. Her résumé was enhanced by the addition of action verbs.

Learning Points

Relative Pronouns in Object Clauses

When you want to clarify which person or thing you are talking about, you use a relative clause. Relative clauses modify a noun. You use relative clauses to add information to a sentence.

Relative clauses are placed after the noun.

An object relative clause describes the object of the clause and comes after the object of the sentence.

For example:

You can include the dates that you worked.

Which dates? The dates that you worked.

The relative pronoun is the object:

When the relative pronoun is the object of the clause, you can drop the relative pronoun if you want to.

For example:

(Clause after the object)

1. This is a very brief synopsis of the type of employer (who) you are aiming to work for.
2. The next section is where you provide details of the work experience (that) you got at school, a job or a volunteer position.
3. You can include the dates (that) you worked.
4. Include the year (when) you received your degree or certificate.
5. You can include any other information (which) you think may be of interest to a potential employer.

Learning Points

How to write a résumé with action verbs

When you need to write a résumé, there are steps you can follow to make sure you include all the necessary information. Below are the steps to writing a great résumé.

1. Choose a style (chronological, functional or combination)

After a style is decided on and you choose a job for your résumé, you should brainstorm your experience and skills.

2. Contact information

Start with your contact information: your name, e-mail address and phone number at the top and usually centered on the page.

3. Objective statement

Next, you should put your statement of career objective, usually one line in sentence format.

4. Qualifications

If you don't have much work experience, you can list your qualifications in the next section. Use action verbs like reconciled, diagnosed and enhanced. These are usually adjectives to describe your work ethic, like persistent, industrious or diligent.

5. Professional Experience

The next section is where you provide details of the work experience that you got at school, a job or a volunteer position.

6. Work History

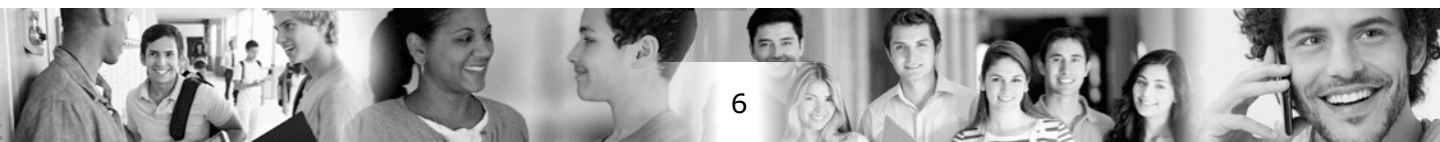

If you have limited work experience you can list your employers and your position in the next section. You can include the dates that you worked, but this is optional.

7. Education

The education that you received is listed in the next part. Include the year when you received your degree or certificate.

8. Achievements/Interests

If you want, you can include any other information which you think may be of interest to a potential employer. This can be interests, other skills or certificates.

Learning Points

