Let's Start!

It's time to start the job search!

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe jobs and careers in both work and social contexts appropriate for the interlocutor.

Ask your partner:

- How is communicating with friends and family different from communicating in the business world?
- What are some things that you should not do when you are communicating with a potential employer?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about events and experiences related to jobs.
- I can talk about general issues related to a job search.
- I can explain general steps for communication etiquette.

Let's Explore!

Kristi tells Bianca about an app she started using.

* An "app" is an application for your phone that connects you to a service.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Kristi: Hey Bianca. The job that I applied to was given to the other candidate.
- Bianca: Aww, that's too bad. What's next?
- Kristi: I'll send them an e-mail that thanks them for their time and confirming that I'm interested in other opportunities which may come up.
- Bianca: Good idea. Friendly communication that is positive and helpful is preferable. Don't burn any bridges! Maybe you should call them. A phone call is more personal.
- Kristi: Yeah, you're right. One thing I need to do is to show interest in what the company does instead of just asking for a job.
- Bianca: That's important. What's the plan now?
- Kristi: Well, jobs that I am qualified for are the ones I need to focus on. And I need to get more methodical about it.
- Bianca: How?
- Kristi: I heard that it's really instrumental to a job search to keep track of what you do during your search. I've found an app which will help me organize potential employers who I have applied to. It's a simple organization system and it's saved on your phone. Contacts that you meet are added. When you apply for a job, the date is added. Everything is updated automatically. Most jobs are advertised online so they can be saved directly to the app.
- Bianca: Wow, that sounds handy. It's important to keep a record of the people who you sent resumes to, so you can follow up with them. You need to remind employers that you are still keen on the position and the company.
- Kristi: Yeah! And the position that I'm going to send an application to today will be the first entry in my new organization tool!

Let's Practice!

Subject and Object Relative Clauses

When you want to clarify which person or thing you are talking about, you use a relative clause. We use relative clauses to give additional information about something without starting a new sentence.

You can begin a relative clause with who for people, which for things or that for either people or things.

In spoken English you usually use that, rather than which or who.

You put the relative clause immediately after the noun it talks about.

The relative clause can come after the subject or the object of the sentence. We can't drop the relative pronoun (that, who, which).

A subject relative clause describes the subject of the clause and comes after the subject of the sentence.

For example:

The job that I applied to was given to the other candidate.

Which job? The job that I applied to.

The clause that I applied to immediately follows job - the noun it describes.

An object relative clause describes the object of the clause and comes after the object of the sentence.

For example:

I'm interested in any other opportunities which may come up.

Which opportunities? The opportunities which may come up.

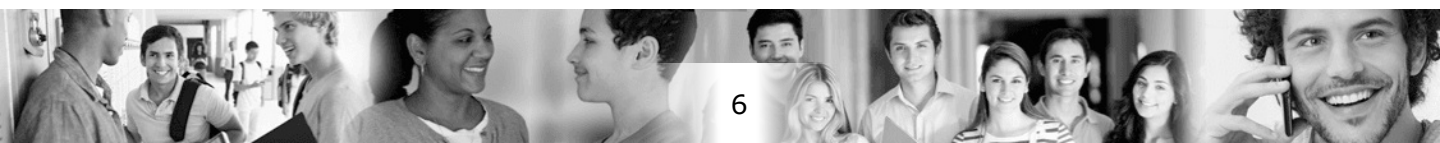

Example	Clause	Relative connector	Type of Relative Clause
Friendly communication that is positive and helpful is preferable.	that is positive and helpful	that	subject
I'm interested in any other opportunities which may come up.	which may come up	which	object
It's important to keep a record of the people who you sent résumés to.	who you sent résumés to	who	object

Learning Points

Examples:

- I've found an app which will help me organize potential employers who I have applied to.
- The position that I'm going to send an application to today will be the first entry in my new organization tool!
- The job that I applied to was given to the other candidate.
- I'll send them an e-mail that thanks them for their time.

Learning Points

The Simple Present Passive

You use an active structure when you want the 'doer' of the action to be the subject.
You use a passive structure when you want the 'receiver' of the action to be the subject.

In active sentences, the thing doing the action is the subject of the sentence and the thing receiving the action is the object. Most sentences are active.

[Thing doing action] + [verb] + [thing receiving action]

For example:

Active sentence = Employers(subject) advertise most jobs (object) online.

In passive sentences, the thing receiving the action is the subject of the sentence and the thing doing the action is optionally included near the end of the sentence.

You can use the passive form if you think that the thing receiving the action is more important or should be emphasized.

You can also use the passive form if you do not know who is doing the action or if you do not want to mention who is doing the action.

[Thing receiving action] + [be] + [past participle of verb] + [by] + [thing doing action]

For example:

Passive sentence = Most jobs (subject) are advertised online. (by employers)

It is not necessary to mention the object in a passive sentence.

You make the Present Passive form of a verb by using tenses of the be verb followed by the past participle.

The Simple Present passive form is:

Subject + am/are/is + past participle

For example:

The app is saved on your phone.

Examples:

- The app is saved on your phone.
- When you apply for a job, the date is added.
- Everything is updated automatically.
- Most jobs are advertised online.
- Jobs can be saved directly to the app.
