

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: What are you doing at the job fair?

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe jobs and careers in both work and social contexts appropriate for the interlocutor.

Ask your partner:

- Do you think having a 30-second introduction speech is useful? Why or why not?
- What things would you put in your 30-second introduction speech?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about experiences and events related to a job.
- I can use the proper intonation for short questions and tag questions.
- I can explain how to give an introduction speech.

Let's Explore!

Kristi delivers her 30-second introduction speech

* A "30-second introduction speech" is a very brief introduction that highlights your skills, interests and career goals.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Kristi: Hi! How are you?
Friend: Good thanks! And you?
Kristi: Great! It's energetic in here, isn't it?
Friend: Yeah! It seems like it's going to be a great event, doesn't it? Here's a map and catalog of the employers.
Kristi: Thanks! I feel like I'm prepared now.
Friend: You need a LOT of preparation before one of these fairs, don't you?
Kristi: Yes. You need to make a good first impression in person. And, you should take the initiative and discern all you can about the employers and industry you are interested in. I also learned the importance of preparing a 30-second introduction speech.
Friend: Sorry? What's that?
Kristi: It's a quick speech that highlights your interests, experience, strengths, accomplishments, and goals. It captures the interest of the person you are attempting to engage.
Friend: That's really important, isn't it? So how do you do it?
Kristi: First, you introduce yourself. Then, you give a brief description of your current role.
Friend: That could be "a student," couldn't it?
Kristi: Sure! Then, you highlight what you could bring to the company, based on your experience and skills. You need to end with a question that shows you have done some research about the company. It should be prepared in advance, but shouldn't sound memorized. I'm going to deliver mine for the first time right now!
Friend: Good luck!
Kristi: Good morning. My name is Kristi Lenard. I've just finished a two-year internship as a copy editor at Polygon. It was a great experience and I was able to put my English degree from Harvard to good use. I'm a skilled editor and writer and I thrive under tight deadlines and multiple projects. For me, relaxation comes in the form of cycling and singing in a choir. I've read that this company is moving to a new digital format. Could you tell me a little bit more about that?

Let's Practice!

Kristi gives instructions for preparing a 30-second introduction speech.

Instructions: Match the two parts of the sentences from Column A to Column B. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Column A

- 1) First you
- 2) Then, you give
- 3) Next, you highlight
- 4) You need to end
- 5) It should be

Column B

- a) what you can bring to the company based on your experience and skills.
- b) prepared in advance but should not sound memorized.
- c) a brief description of your current role.
- d) with a question that shows you have done some research about the company.
- e) introduce yourself.

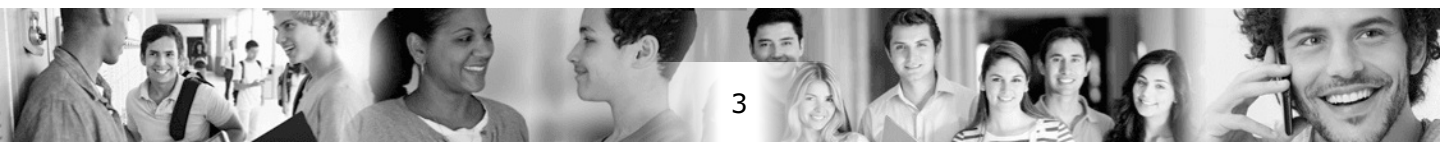

Let's Practice!

What does Kristi say about the best way to prepare your speech?

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write down the missing words. Use highlights, captures, initiative, in advance, accomplishments, or discern.

- 1) You should take the _____.
- 2) You should _____ all you can about the employers and industry you are interested in.
- 3) It's a quick speech that _____ your interests, experience, strengths, accomplishments, and goals.
- 4) An introduction speech should include your _____ among other important things.
- 5) An introduction speech _____ the interest of the person you are attempting to engage.

Extension Activity

Write and deliver a 30-second introduction speech.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Imagine that you are going to a job fair.
- Make some notes on your career objectives, strengths and skills.
- Write your 30-second introduction speech.
- Practice your speech until it sounds natural.
- Deliver your speech to your partner or class.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I make notes on my objectives, skills and strengths.

☐ ☐

I write a 30-second introduction speech.

☐ ☐

I practice my speech until it sounds natural.

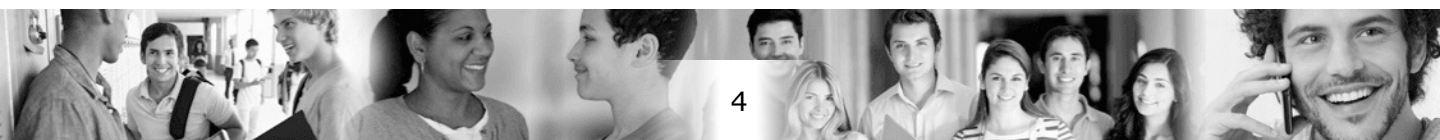

☐ ☐

I deliver my speech to a partner or group.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- catalog (noun): a listing of items, sometimes with pictures of items for sale
e.g. Here's a map and catalog of the employers.
- first impression (expression): the first and immediate effect of an experience or perception upon the mind e.g. You need to make a good first impression in person.
- to take the initiative (expression): to activate oneself to do something even if one has not been asked to do it e.g. You should take the initiative.
- to discern (verb): to recognize or identify as separate and distinct e.g. You should discern all you can about the employers and industry you are interested in.
- strength (noun): a good characteristic e.g. It's a quick speech that highlights your interests, experience, strengths, accomplishments, and goals.
- accomplishment (noun): something done admirably or creditably e.g. An introduction speech should include your accomplishments among other important things.
- to capture (verb): the act of getting control of something e.g. An introduction speech captures the interest of your audience.
- to highlight (verb): to emphasize something important
e.g. Then you highlight what you could bring to the company, based on your experience and skills.
- in advance (expression): before a particular time, or before doing a particular thing e.g. It should be prepared in advance, but shouldn't sound memorized.

Learning Points

Intonation of Question Tags and Short Questions

You can use rising and falling intonation to give meaning to your statements.

In a tag question, your voice can go up or down.

Rising intonation is when your voice goes up and it is called falling intonation when your voice goes down.

It's energetic in here, isn't it? ↘

Use falling intonation when you are positive that your comment is true. (You are sure it is energetic at the job fair.) The tag question in this situation is not like a real question.

You use falling intonation to invite someone to continue the conversation.

That could be a student, couldn't it? ↗

Rising intonation means that the speaker is not sure if their statement is true. You think that an employment role could be "student," but you aren't sure. The tag in this situation is more like a real question. You want your friend to confirm whether or not you are correct.

Short statements can be made into questions by using rising intonation.

You? ↗ means "How about you?" When you use this you are returning the same question back to someone.

For example:

'How was your weekend?'

"Great! You?"

You also use rising intonation to give a different meaning to words like sorry and excuse me.

Sorry. ↘ means "I apologize."

Sorry? ↗ means "I didn't hear you. Please repeat."

Excuse me. ↘ means "Please move." or "I need to interrupt."

Excuse me? ↗ means "I didn't hear you." or "I can't believe what you just said!"

Examples:

- There's lots of energy here, isn't there? ↘
- Good thanks! And you? ↗
- You need a LOT of preparation before one of these fairs, don't you? ↘
- Sorry? ↗ What's that?
- That could be student, couldn't it? ↗

Learning Points

Tag Questions: Negative Tags

You use tag questions to ask for clarification and confirmation.

Question tags are found at the end of statements and act as short questions.

They are primarily used when we want to:

- verify that something is true or not, or
- to get a reply from the person we are talking to.

Question tags can be positive or negative, depending on the meaning you want to express.

A positive statement is followed by a negative question tag.

Use this when you think the other person will agree by saying 'yes'.

Note: When the verb in the statement is am, the tag is aren't I. (not amn't I)

For example: I'm late, aren't I?

You always use the same pronoun in the statement and in the tag.

If the subject is a verb, the tag uses the corresponding pronoun.

For example:

There is a lot of energy here, isn't there?

The job fair is crowded, isn't it?

The speaker is interesting, isn't he?

If the main verb is to be or a modal verb, the tag will be the same.

For all other main verbs, use the tag do/does or did/didn't. Look at the examples in the chart.

Main Verb	Tag	Main Verb	Tag
He is/was	isn't/wasn't he?	She has/had	doesn't/didn't she?
You are	aren't you?	You have	don't you?
He can	can't he?	He likes	doesn't he?
We could	couldn't we?	You like	don't you?
You will	won't you?	You liked	didn't you?

Learning Points

Examples:

- There's lots of energy here, isn't there?
- It seems like it's going to be a great event, doesn't it?
- You need a LOT of preparation before one of these fairs, don't you?
- That's really important, isn't it?
- That could be student, couldn't it?

